Gov. Corbett signs voter ID bill into law

PHILADELPHIA. Pennsylvania's controversial voter ID bill passed the House of Representatives yesterday and was signed promptly by Gov. Tom Corbett.

The bill requires all voters to show photo identification before they can cast a ballot and would take effect before the November presidential election. Critics say it unfairly affects the poor, minorities and seniors, and will discourage those demographics from voting.

"While I'm disappointed that the state House has continued this march toward voter disenfranchisement, the battle is not over," state Sen. Anthony Williams said in a statement. "The constitutional right to vote is too important to institute disingenuous hurdles at the ballot box. Period." He said that a lawsuit will be filed on behalf of the voters affected.

Political watchdog Committee of Seventy and former city managing director Joe Certaine are organizing a new citywide coalition that will conduct a nonpartisan campaign to educate Philadelphia voters about the bill.

"If necessary, we'll drive voters to PennDOT offices to get ID," said Seventy president Zack Stalberg. METRO/AW

Radnor thief ID'd

DELAWARE COUNTY. Radnor police identified a suspect in a bank robbery Tuesday afternoon.

Authorities are looking for Michael Hamilton, 25. Hamilton allegedly robbed a Sovereign Bank near Villanova University around 1:40 p.m by passing a teller a threatening note.

The suspect fled on foot with an undisclosed amount of cash. Hamilton is described as a 5-foot-11 white man of about 140 pounds. METRO/AW

Flower show attendance up

CENTER CITY. The 2012 Philadelphia International Flower Show welcomed 270,000 visitors to the Pennsylvania Convention Center last week, up 5,000 from the previous year, the show's organizer said.

The show, titled "Hawaii: The Islands of Aloha" featured more than 50 vendors from the Hawaiin islands with homegrown plants and products. Organizers have already announced next year's theme will be "Brilliant!" a celebration of contemporary culture, design, gardens and landscapes in Britain. METRO

Want to help the needy? Not so fast, Nutter says

- City to ban outdoor feeding of homeless in parks starting next month
- Mayor says it's about health and dignity, but many are skeptical

Starting next month, it will be illegal to feed homeless people in city parks, under a controversial plan announced by Mayor Michael Nutter yesterday.

Nutter said the plan is intended to increase the health, safety and dignity of the city's most vulnerable population. Once the new regulation takes effect, groups who feed the homeless outside will be permitted to do so outside City Hall, but they must register. Violators will be given two warnings and fined $150 for a third infraction.

"Providing to those who are hungry must not be about opening the car trunk, handing out a bunch of sandwiches, and then driving off into the dark and rainy night," Nutter said.

While some homeless advocates voiced support for the plan, others say it will further harm the indigent and push them into the shadows.

"You have to put new systems in place," said Christine Vaganos, a Drexel grad student who has volunteered at city shelters. "I don't believe they have the capacity for every homeless person."

William Wascon has been sleeping out near LOVE Park since losing his apartment recently. He decried the way the city currently treats homeless and said the new regulation does not take into account some people's lack of mobility.

▶ "They treat you like a wild animal," Wascon said.

"I got bad legs, sometimes I can't make it [to a shelter or church]."
WASCON

"I got bad legs, sometimes I can't make it [to a shelter or church]," he said.

For some time, charitable groups have provided meals for homeless people on the Benjamin Franklin Parkway and Love Park weekly. Nutter's office denied speculation that the move was done to prepare for the opening of the Barnes Museum and Rodin Museum on the Parkway later this year.

"We have wrestled with this for some years and it just so happens it's not linked to the opening of a particular place on the Parkway," Nutter's spokesman Mark McDonald said.

Plan details

The city's Board of Health will hold a public hearing today on the new regulation and accept public comment for 30 days. The law is expected to take effect in mid-April.

- Outdoor feeding applies to the distribution of free food to groups of three or more people. It does not include food distributed with the authorization of the managing director's office, the Department of Parks and Recreation or sponsored by a city agency.
- Those interested in feeding at the City Hall site must submit an application to the city health department to receive an outdoor feeding certificate.
- The City Hall site will have water for handwashing and portable bathrooms. No schedule for feeding has been set.
- The administration and stakeholders are developing a plan to encourage all those who are hungry and outdoor feeders to move indoors.

Strange bedfellows? PETA and LFL

Members of the Lingerie Football League's Philadelphia Passion strutted their stuff outside The Gallery at Market East yesterday. But rather than rallying for a game, they tackled a different issue: animal cruelty.

"PETA teamed up with the football league for a campaign to expose cruelty on fur farms," Katie Arth of PETA said. "Most people have no idea animals are beaten to death, have their necks broken. ... This is a fun way to put out the information to the public."

PETA is teaming up with the Lingerie Football League in cities across the continent and has already staged similar demonstrations in Chicago, Seattle and Toronto. The campaign has also featured male athletes in pro sports. A crowd of fans and curious onlookers gathered yesterday at Ninth and Market streets as the athletes waved signs and chanted in their team uniforms — bras and boy shorts.

Many were impressed by the display of support, but a few of the bystanders felt the demonstration wasn't driving the message home.

"It's a little distracting from the cause of killing animals," Raymond Zigler said as he watched the girls. "They're dressed skimpy — practically nude — and that sends more of an X-rated message as opposed to the one related to animal cruelty."

Shock and awe

PETA has become known for using shock tactics and media stunts when it comes to raising awareness. Posing for the nonprofit's "I'd Rather Go Naked Than Wear Fur" campaign became a cause celebre when it was introduced in 2009.

- PETA most recently made local headlines when it donated six months' worth of toilet paper printed with a message about fecal matter contaminating meat to the city of Trenton.

Native son Santorum ahead in Pa.

PHILADELPHIA. Fresh off primary wins in the deep South, Rick Santorum has a sizable advantage over GOP presidential front-runner Mitt Romney in the latest Pennsylvania poll.

The Quinnipiac University poll shows Santorum, the former Pennsylvania senator, with a 36-22 lead over the former Massachusetts governor roughly six weeks ahead of Pennsylvania's April 24 primary. Texas Congressman Ron Paul has 12 percent, with 8 percent for former Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich.

Santorum's recent surge has also put him in a virtual dead heat with President Barack Obama. If Santorum made it to the general election, 44 percent said they would vote for Santorum versus 45 percent for Obama. In other possible November matchups, Obama tops Romney 46 to 40 percent.

Santorum's biggest advantage in Pennsylvania in the Republican race is among women, with 41 percent of female voters backing him compared to 18 percent for Romney. Among men, Santorum gets a slight edge, 30 to 27.

▶ Tamara Rhoades

Four people have been charged with beating a woman and setting her on fire after luring her to the city through a chat room, according to the Philadelphia district attorney's office.

Tamara Rhoades, 24, Michael Rhoades, 34, and Steven Mills, 22, are charged with attempted murder, conspiracy, false imprisonment, arson and related offenses. A relative, 14, is also charged in connection with the Feb. 21 incident.

Tamara Rhoades allegedly lured the 20-year-old victim through a chat line from Pittsburgh to the apartment the four shared on North 23rd Street, where she was regularly beaten and intimidated into staying, according to spokeswoman Tasha Jamerson. Authorities do not have a motive at this time, Jamerson said, but 6ABC reported the victim allegedly threatened the Rhoades' daughter.

All three adults allegedly beat the woman on Feb. 21, then poured flammable liquid on her and lit her on fire. The woman was able to put out the flames but was severely burned. The defendants then put her on a bus back to Pittsburgh, prosecutors said.

The Rhoades are facing additional charges for assaulting a second woman who police found Feb. 22 while executing a search warrant on the apartment. That victim, 21, also came to stay at the apartment through a chat line and was beaten and held.

Blago makes final pitch before prison

Convicted of federal corruption, ex-Illinois governor begins sentence today Still has 'faith in the future'

Former Illinois Gov. Rod Blagojevich yesterday used his final public appearance before reporting to prison to defend his political actions and express confidence that his conviction on federal corruption charges will ultimately be overturned.

Blagojevich called his looming 14-year prison sentence, which starts today, a "dark and hard journey," but said he would draw strength from his belief that he had "helped real, ordinary people" during his years in office.

"We still have faith in the future," Blagojevich told the crowd of about 300 people who gathered outside his home on Chicago's northside to hear his final statement, which was timed precisely to coincide with 5 p.m. local time news shows.

"We are appealing the case," Blagojevich said with his tearful wife Patti at his side. "We have great trust and faith in the appeal and while my faith in things has sometimes been challenged, I still believe this is America, this is a country that is governed by the rule of law," he said.

Blagojevich was arrested in his northside home by the FBI on the morning of Dec. 9, 2008, on political corruption charges, including an allegation that he conspired to sell the Senate seat vacated by President Barack Obama in return for political favors and donations.

Three years and two trials later, Blagojevich was convicted of political corruption and U.S. District Court Judge James Zagel sentenced the two-term governor and father of two daughters to 14 years in prison for corruption. REUTERS

Alleged shooter of 16 Afghans flown out of country by US

The U.S. soldier who allegedly shot and killed at least 16 Afghan civilians has been flown out of the country, according to a Pentagon spokesman.

The staff sergeant, whose name was being withheld by the military until charges are filed, was flown to a non-European country other than the U.S., the spokesman, Navy Capt. John Kirby, said today.

The soldier was moved "because we don't have the type of detention facility in Afghanistan to hold a U.S. service member for any length of time," Kirby said in an interview. "The detention facilities in Afghanistan are intended for enemy combatants. Our own regulations and policies don't allow us to keep a U.S. service member there."

BRAYDEN SIMMS

POLITICAL WORLDLINESS FOR AN IMPOLITE WORLD

@METROPOLITIK

The results of Tuesday's Deep South primary contests in Mississippi and Alabama confirm what many political analysts had probably already assumed: It's going to be a long, nasty election season, folks.

Rick Santorum emerged a surprise victor in mainland competitions on Tuesday, winning both Southern states despite organizational and monetary disadvantages compared with front-runner Mitt Romney. But the victories, while nice, ultimately proved hollow: Proportional delegate allocation (in which the three top contenders, having ended the close night mere percentage points apart, will each receive a similar share of the spoils), combined with Romney wins in two low-profile races in Hawaii and American Samoa, conspired to crown the more moderate contender the true winner of the day. Romney scooped up the most (estimated) delegates of the night, muddling the Santorum surge and reinforcing the mathematical reality that his substantial (estimated) delegate lead will line the path to his nomination.

Then there's Newt Gingrich, whose second-place finishes on Tuesday invalidate his so-called Southern strategy, predicated on the historian's ability to sweep the more conservative U.S. states. The feisty former Georgia congressman failed to deliver wins in the region presumed to be most receptive to his patented big ideas — like moon colonization and helping poor children by giving them jobs cleaning schools. Regardless, Gingrich reiterated his intentions to stay in the race all the way, posing a serious threat to Santorum's prospects, which fare much better given a one-on-one battle with Romney.

OK, but where does that leave us? Well, the same place we were before, mostly. Despite his losses Tuesday, Romney's math argument, while not exactly inspirational, does hold a certain unassailable logic: Unless something big happens to change the race's dynamics — like, for instance, Gingrich deciding to suck it up and drop out — it remains unlikely for Santorum to top Romney in delegates. And, again, the name of the game is 1,144; any candidate that reaches this number of delegates will automatically be declared the Republican presidential nominee. Estimates put Romney way out in front.

There's another possibility, though less remote. If none of the candidates hits the magic 1,144 number, the nomination will go to a brokered convention, where party leaders will be forced to decide the nominee themselves. This is the outcome Gingrich favors. "I believe that after the primaries are over it will be obvious the so-called front-runner in fact didn't get there, and from that point we will be in a whole different conversation," Gingrich said in defeat. A conversation, presumably, involving child janitors and space fantasies.

Civilian killings hurt Afghan war support from Americans

Forty percent of Americans said the shooting spree by a U.S. soldier stationed in Afghanistan which resulted in the deaths of 16 villagers had weakened their support for the war, a poll showed yesterday.

Sixty-one percent of Americans surveyed in the March 12-13 online poll by Reuters/Ipsos said the remaining U.S. troops should be brought home immediately, down slightly from the 66 percent who expressed that opinion in a similar poll from early March. Seventeen percent disagreed.

The Obama administration is seeking to contain the fallout from the shocking shooting on Sunday, in which a U.S. staff sergeant walked off his base in southern Afghanistan and shot the 16 civilians, mostly women and children, in a nearby village.

Coming on the heels of violent outcry in Afghanistan triggered by U.S. soldiers' burning of copies of the Koran on a NATO military base, the shooting underscores the challenges the United States and its NATO allies face in the country, where, after more than 10 years of war, the Taliban remains a potent enemy. REUTERS

Murdoch son pleads innocence

LONDON. James Murdoch made a last-ditch appeal to a parliamentary committee investigating phone-hacking at his company, ahead of a report expected from the committee in coming weeks that could determine whether he has a future in Britain.

The committee, which hauled James and his father Rupert before it for a three-hour grilling in July, is expected to criticize the younger Murdoch for failing to uncover the scale of the problem, threatening his role as chairman of pay-TV group BSkyB.

In a seven-page letter, the 39-year-old apologized to those affected but said he had been let down by senior staff on whom he had relied, allowing a scandal to escalate. REUTERS

Lohan in trouble with the law again

It's been, what? A hot minute since Lindsay Lohan hasn't been in trouble with the law?

Her days-long winning streak is seemingly coming to an end after allegedly hitting a man with her brand new black Porsche and fleeing the scene in Hollywood late Tuesday night, according to TMZ. Lohan was reportedly trying to execute a three-point turn and avoid paparazzi while leaving a nightclub when her car made contact with the manager of a nearby hookah lounge. The manager, whose knee was supposedly grazed, initially said he was fine and didn't need medical attention, according to paparazzi on the scene. But when he was informed that Lohan was behind the wheel, he reportedly began complaining about being injured. The man was taken to the emergency room and is said to be considering hiring a lawyer and pressing charges. Police sources tell the website that they will open a hit-and-run investigation if the man decides to press charges.

▶ Uh-oh! Lohan could be in trouble yet again.

Theron adopts baby boy

Welcome to motherhood, Charlize Theron!

A rep for the Oscar-winning actress, 36, tells The Associated Press in a Wednesday statement: "Charlize Theron has adopted a child. She is the proud mom of a healthy baby boy named Jackson."

No further details were provided about the single star's unexpected baby news.

Lawrence is getting used to Hollywood

Jennifer Lawrence isn't in a hurry to make any enemies in Hollywood, so when a tabloid story suggested she was feuding with "Twilight" star Kristen Stewart, the "Hunger Games" star did everything she could to quash it. "There were all these like, fake quotes from me that were actually hilarious. Some of them were from my 'pal' and 'sources,'" Lawrence tells Access Hollywood. "Then I was like, 'Oh my God. If she reads this, what if she thinks it's true?' I just shot her an e-mail, and was like, 'Hey, can't wait to see more as this feud unfolds!'" Stewart, no stranger to being tabloid fodder, took it in stride. "She wrote me back," says Lawrence. "She was like, 'It's fine. Welcome to the world where everything you say gets turned into |something it's not|.' So, she understood."

Smart girl. The last person I'd want to get into a fight with is Kristen Stewart. I bet she fights dirty.

Talking points

Barrymore is acting pregnant

Drew Barrymore hasn't responded to rumors that she and fiance Will Kopelman are expecting a child — but she's not doing anything to dispel them. In fact, showing up at a lunch meeting at a restaurant carrying her own box of Saltine crackers — a morning sickness-combating staple — as Barrymore did this week probably doesn't help prove pregnancy-watchers wrong. Last month, the couple was spotted leaving a doctor's office with a sonogram printout in hand.

Will Perry write a tell-all?

Katy Perry has reportedly been flooded with offers to write a tell-all book about her divorce from Russell Brand, with one publisher offering $3.1 million for the story, according to the Sun. There's no word on whether she's considering the offer, but some speculate that her recent silence seems suspect. "When everything was going well, Katy couldn't stop talking about him," a source notes. "Since the split, neither of them have said anything — keeping the price of a deal high."

Harry goes back to the Apache

▶ Anderson

It looks like his recent celebration-packed tour of the Caribbean and Brazil was the last hurrah for Prince Harry for a while, as the British royal reportedly has been told to knock off the fun and get back to his Apache helicopter training, according to the Sun. "Harry has been told that his whole life is now dedicated to the Apache. He's been told that he can't spend every spare moment down the pub and can't risk spending more time on another royal tour," a source says. "Harry has taken those orders on board and assured the people who need to know that he will knuckle down and give absolutely everything to the final weeks of his Apache training."

Anderson on experimenting

"X-Files" star Gillian Anderson confirms to Out magazine that she's no stranger to same-sex romance. "I was in a relationship with a girl for a long time when I was in high school," the 43-year-old actress says. "You know, I'm old enough that I can talk about that." Anderson acknowledges that the dalliances might have had a bigger impact on her had they played a bigger role in her romantic life. "If I had thought I was 100 percent gay, would it have been a different experience for me?" she wonders. "It's possible that my attitude around it came, on some level, from knowing that I still liked boys."

10 REASONS TO GO TO THE MOVIES

Must-see

1 '21 Jump Street' Based on the '80s TV series, this one stars Jonah Hill and Channing Tatum as two less-than-slick police officers who go undercover in an attempt to bust a high school drug ring.

SONY PICTURES

▶ "21 Jump Street"

2 'Jeff Who Lives at Home' By now, you'd think we'd be sick of seeing Jason Segel play a shorts-wearing manchild who lives in his mom's basement. And yet, we're not at all.

3 'John Carter' In Disney's adaptation of Edgar Rice Burroughs' novels, Taylor Kitsch plays a Civil War vet who can't catch a break: He ends up on Mars, gets taken prisoner by giants and then has to save the stranded princess.

4 'A Thousand Words' Eddie Murphy angers a spiritual guru, inciting a curse — or a blessing, if that's your bag, hippie — that gives him only 1,000 words to speak before he dies.

5 'Silent House' Supposedly based on a true story, this horror flick tells the story of a father and daughter renovating an old cottage — until the weird noise coming from the top floor becomes their priority.

6 'Project X' Shot in hand-held style by a cast of unknowns, this — like every great high school film — is about nerds conquering all by throwing a rager.

7 'Dr. Seuss' The Lorax' Zac Efron, Danny DeVito, Taylor Swift and Ed Helms voice the central characters of the beloved children's story.

8 'Wanderlust' Paul Rudd and Jennifer Aniston star in this comedy about a couple who go in search of an unconventional life on a hippie commune.

9 'Good Deeds' Tyler Perry writes, directs and stars in this story about a successful man, named Deeds, who is jolted out of his predictable existence by doing, you guessed it, good deeds.

10 'Gone' Amanda Seyfried plays a woman haunted by the abduction of her sister two years prior.

Can Kasabian conquer America?

PAT HEALY
PAT.HEALY@METRO.US

GETTY IMAGES

▶ This is not America. This is Kasabian playing a packed show in Leeds. Kasabian play the much smaller Theatre of the Living Arts on March 21.

Tom Meighan arrives with a bodyguard in a black SUV with tinted windows. The Kasabian singer is a superstar in his home country, but in Austin, Texas, at the SXSW Music Conference, he is afforded the luxury of anonymity.

Plopping down on a couch in the lobby of the Radisson Hotel, he wonders aloud if American popular music will ever experience another British invasion.

"This obsession about breaking in America isn't really happening anymore for English bands," he says, scratching his unshaven neck. "It's kind of gone, isn't it?"

But not for Kasabian. With their September-released "Velociraptor!", the band is touring the U.S. for the first time in five years.

"You can get carried away with the arenas back in England," he says. "Here, it feels like we're 21 again, starting over."

A lot about Kasabian feels like starting over. "Velociraptor!" is a cleaner sound than the band's Brit-pop past, filled with funky grooves and fun lyrics.

Meighan says "Let's Roll Like We Used To" is about when he and Kasabian co-founder Sergio Pizzorno "used to smoke jazz cigarettes and wander through the fields," while the song "Rewired" is "about being naughty in a hotel room."

"We'll always keep reinventing ourselves," says Meighan. "Our next album, I said to Serge, we'll probably put eight songs on it and every song will be two minutes long, and it will be a whole electronic album with no guitars. I don't know."

Monkey brain brainstorm

One of the first indications that "Velociraptor!" doesn't take itself seriously is toward the end of the second song, "Days Are Forgotten," where Meighan talks about chewing a monkey brain. What?

"'Chewing a monkey brain' comes from 'Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom.' He says, 'chilled monkey brain,' not 'chew.' I always had an obsession with making my own words. The only person who got it was my brother, because I used to say it as a kid."

Can you spot 'Community' plots or not?

LEWIS JACOBS/NBC

▶ It's not surprising to see the Greendale campus turned into the setting for a Wild West showdown on "Community." The series returns tonight at 8 on NBC.

The off-the-wall study group at Greendale Community College is back in session tonight. In honor of the absurd sitcom's return, we've put together this pop quiz on some of the strangest, funniest episodes. Can you spot the fake storylines?

1 Attendees of the Greendale Halloween party turn into zombies. Troy (Donald Glover) saves the day by turning on the air conditioning, which breaks the "fever." The army arrives and erases everyone's memories.

2 The campus is turned into an apocalyptic wasteland after a paintball war breaks out.

3 At Troy and Abed's (Danny Pudi) housewarming party, Jeff (Joel McHale) assigns a number to his six friends; they agree to roll a die to determine who will meet the pizza guy at the door. This results in Pierce (Chevy Chase) getting shot and Britta (Gillian Jacobs) starting a fire.

4 Jeff tips off Chang (Ken Jeong) that the Greendale glee club is illegally performing copyrighted songs; the singers are served with a cease-and-desist order. For the holiday pageant to go on as planned, the glee instructor uses mind control to get the study group to participate.

5 Annie (Alison Brie) breaks Abed's limited edition "The Dark Knight" DVD and lies, saying that it's been stolen. Batman himself investigates.

AMBER RAY
amber.ray@metro.us

Answer key

1. The "zombie" fever was caused by supplies Dean Pelton (Jim Rash) bought at an army surplus store in Ep. 6, Season 2: "Epidemiology."
2. Greendale's annual paintball game turns serious in "Modern Warfare" (Ep. 23, Season 1).
3. The entire episode explores the alternate universes that result from different rolls of the die in "Remedial Chaos Theory" (Ep. 4, Season 3).
4. "Regional Holiday Music" (Ep. 10, Season 3) was a "Glee" spoof.
5. In "Foosball and Nocturnal Vigilantism" (Ep. 9, Season 3), we also discover Shirley (Yvette Nicole Brown) bullied Jeff so badly when they were kids that he wet his pants. So yes — these are all actual storylines.

When it's time for an apology

▶ Squabbles are going to happen. Be sure to talk with — not at — your partner and consider offering up an "I'm sorry."

WAVEBREAK MEDIA

Rumors are swirling that Rihanna and Chris Brown might reunite. She has said publicly that being single is overrated, but there has to be more to it than that. I would assume that a heartfelt apology from Brown about his reported physical abuse that led to their breakup years ago played a big part. So how much power can an apology have? Of course, physical abuse is the extreme, and there is no question that an apology was vital in that case, but what about smaller transgressions? When is saying you're sorry a good idea?

Shrink wrap

DR. JANE GREER

HEALTH.METRO.US

There are many things that can make one partner or the other angry and upset: He forgot to call, she was late and left him waiting, he promised to do an errand but got caught up at work. When couples sit down to talk about these issues, so often they simply talk at each other. "How could you forget to mail my invitations?" one will ask. "How can you not understand that my boss needed me and then the post office was closed?" the other will counter. In these situations, there is no attempt to consider the other person's feelings or show any empathy. If this sounds familiar, it might be time to consider offering an apology.

People think of an apology as an assertion of wrongdoing. Think of it instead as a healing balm to soothe your partner's upset feelings. You had every intention of mailing those invitations. You may feel that the outcome was out of your control. Lots of times we do or don't do things that hurt our partner's feelings because we believe that we had no other option at the time, and it was in no way intentional. But you can still be sorry that your partner's feelings were ruffled. Once the apology is offered and the wronged party feels heard and understood, you can then, hopefully without anger, get your communication back on track and discuss what happened so that you might prevent it from happening again.

In my practice, I have seen an apology clear the air instantly. It is a declaration of caring about your partner's feelings. And it can be the magic key that opens the door to reconnecting.

We got relief from our uterine fibroids with UFE – Uterine Fibroid Embolization.

Heavy Periods? Pelvic Pain? Frequent Urination? Constipation/Bloating?

You might have uterine fibroids

Uterine fibroids are non-cancerous tumors that grow on or in the muscles of the uterus (womb). At least 35 percent of women in the U.S. have fibroids. African American women are more likely to develop fibroids.

Uterine Fibroid Embolization (UFE) is a safe non-surgical alternative to hysterectomy.

Obama's albatross: Race to the bottom?

RE: "WHAT'S BRINGING OBAMA DOWN?": Our wonderful president has done an amazingly great job since taking our nation's highest office. He unfortunately gets credited with economic problems he did not create, but inherited. President Obama has remained diligent and is making progress by addressing the U.S. economy. I never liked answers cloaked in cliche, however this is the one time I would accept the answer of: "It's because I'm black right?"

RONALD CARTER, VIA E-MAIL

It's obvious that our president's popularity decline reverts back to his color. It is sad that we Americans always want to point the finger and pull the race card, but not once have the media really praised this man for what he has accomplished in less than four years. Soldiers and their families need to thank him for bringing them home.

TONDALAYA HARRIS, VIA E-MAIL

I think the American people need to give Obama a chance again. There is no way that he can possibly turn a whole country around when there are people who lost faith in him because he couldn't give them a job the next day. People keep blaming him for what Congress has their hands in, and that's not right.

ASHLEY ALLARD, VIA E-MAIL

Respect is earned, not taken by force

RE: "SHOW SOME RESPECT FOR OTHERS' BELIEFS": Mr. Rivera bemoans a lack of tolerance for Bible-based beliefs? Newsflash: Nobody is persecuting Christians for their beliefs. They are simply being called out for using the Bible — a text that's been used for ages to justify war, slavery and a thousand other terrible things — to excuse their petty hatreds. All of us would do better following the words of a young carpenter from Nazareth, rather than vague passages from the Old Testament.

JOSEPH CONNELL, VIA E-MAIL

You ask why we can't show the same respect for Christianity that we do to other beliefs and lifestyles. Well, we'd love to — but unfortunately Christians won't stop polluting our schools and politics, and they continue to work to take away the rights and freedoms of other beliefs and lifestyles based on their personal religious motivations. If you want respect, be respectful. Stop forcing others to live by your belief structure.

KIERA CAPEHART, VIA E-MAIL

Our Founding Fathers wanted a separation of Church and State as a way to protect against persecution and discrimination. It was not the intent to create a nation unto itself to break the Law of the Land, which is derived from the will of the people. If our country believes a woman has the right to choose and can have an abortion, it is legal. If the Law of the Land now states that all insurance providers must offer contraceptive care, that law has to be upheld — with no excuses. Never was the separation of Church and State meant to circumvent the Law of the Land. If you don't like the laws, then you have the liberty to change them by democratic means.

Horoscope

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Financial trends could be rather unstable. In situations where things are running smoothly, don't turn around and behave in ways that nullify everything you've gained.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Unless you're careful, you could put yourself in a position where you unknowingly begin operating against your best interest. Don't be your own worst enemy.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Your luck does have its limitations, so be careful not to press it too far; for example, don't attempt to use it as a replacement for honest effort.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. If you fail to control events, they will end up dominating you. Unless you devise a sensible game plan and stick to it, you'll be tossed and turned by the unforgiving winds of circumstance.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Although you are likely to be fortunate where your material interests are concerned, this luck isn't apt to spill over into the realm of reputation. Be careful regarding your self-image.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. As long as you can treat whatever happens philosophically, it should be a good day for you. Lose your cool or overreact in any way, and you could suffer some negative consequences.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Strive to be as fair to yourself as you are with others. After all, you're entitled to the same consideration as everyone is and if you don't give it to yourself, no one else will.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. If you team up with a partner, be sure it's someone who behaves as you do. You will be accountable for your counterpart's tactics and behavior, and you'll share the results as well.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Your objectives can be achieved, provided that you select a partner who envisions the end result the same way you do. If he or she sees things differently, it could be a bad scene.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. If you're planning a get-together with friends, invite only those who mix well with one another. Anyone who doesn't could spoil everyone else's good time.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. There are ample opportunities surrounding you, yet you could be oblivious to them. If you can't or won't recognize them, you will only have yourself to blame.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. It's always important to treat everyone with whom you're involved as courteously and amicably as possible. Be careful that you don't kowtow to the big shots while disrespecting everyone else. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Birds taking care of own

Eagles sign Jackson, Cole to extensions ◗ No major splashes via free agency ◗ Content with current roster

It was supposed to be Trent Cole's day. He met with reporters after putting his John Hancock on a shiny, new four-year extension with the Eagles. Cole shot down rumors the team was trying to reverse the opinion that they didn't sign their homegrown stars to big-time contracts.

"I don't have that consensus," Cole said. "They're going to do what's best for the team and what's best for the franchise."

Then, some four hours later, the news broke that DeSean Jackson had signed a five-year deal worth an estimated $51 million. There is $15 million fully guaranteed.

"We are thrilled to be able to keep one of the NFL's top playmakers in Philadelphia," said Eagles coach Andy Reid in a statement. "DeSean is a game breaker, he has the speed and ability to score from anywhere on the field, and he has proven himself to be a big threat for our offense. Signing our own players was a big priority for us this offseason, and DeSean was certainly high on our list."

Jackson, 25, was a second-round draft pick in 2008. Cole, 29, was selected in the fifth round back in 2005. They are now signed through 2016 and 2017, respectively. On Tuesday, the Eagles agreed on a three-year extension with tackle Todd Herremans, a fourth round pick in 2005. In other words, as NFL free agency rolls on, the Eagles seem content with their current roster.

"We really feel that we don't need any extra pieces brought to us in free agency," Herremans said. "We feel that the team we have in the locker room can make a great run and go to the Super Bowl next year."

▶ McCoy might skip training camp if a new deal isn't reached.

Eagles would be wise to keep extensions coming

Birds brass should continue its 'draft and re-sign' approach ◗ McCoy deal must get done before training camp ◗ Deserves Foster-type money

The Eagles have jumped into free agency with a unique approach. They are signing their own guys first. It's a change of philosophy from the free agent spending spree the team went on last offseason.

"We thought there were opportunities there to get some players that can make a difference at key positions in free agency, but really what we want to do is draft and re-sign our own," GM Howie Roseman said last month.

Todd Herremans, Trent Cole and DeSean Jackson are all locked up for the long haul. Still, there are a few other players the franchise would be wise to throw money at. After the above deals, the Eagles saved an estimated $6.6 million in cap room, according to eaglescap.com, and have $21.9 million in space.

1. LeSean McCoy

The star running back enjoyed a breakout season in 2011, leading the NFL in rushing TDs (17) and making his first Pro Bowl. He's in the final year of his rookie deal — worth $615,000 in '12 — and there's a strong chance McCoy would hold out and miss camp without a new deal. McCoy was the Eagles' MVP last year and should be paid as such, right around the $44 million deal Arian Foster signed.

2. Evan Mathis

The seven-year vet burst out of nowhere and took over as the starting left guard in 2011. He doesn't get the accolades that linemates Todd Herremans and Jason Peters do, but he was every bit as effective and allowed zero sacks. It's a surprise the Birds allowed him to get to free agency — Mathis is considered as one of the top three guards available — especially after the way Howard Mudd's line jelled with his addition.

3. Jeremy Maclin

OK, this one isn't a slam dunk. Maclin was a first-round pick, so he'll be competitively compensated through 2013, when he could earn $3 million. However, if the goal is to keep the current nucleus together, then go ahead and rip up that rookie deal and avoid another DeSean situation in two years. Maclin was on pace for his best year in 2011 before a midseason injury.

Sixers get outpaced in Indiana

The Sixers got Spencer Hawes back, but they couldn't slow Indiana's talented triumvirate of David West, Danny Granger and Roy Hibbert last night in a 111-94 loss. For the Sixers, Evan Turner once again had the hot hand scoring 21 point on 9-of-11 shooting. Next up: Miami, on Friday.
